WILLIAMSTOWN.

Miss Millie J. Drury is expected home in a few days from Burlington and Richmond.

The patrons of our village creamery received 50c per pound for butterfat on the 3d inst.

Daniel C. Townsend's only son, Herbert, and family of Plattsburg, N. Y., are here on a visit.

Ed. Lawrence of Adams has been the guest of his cousin, H. S. Drury, a day or two this week.

Robert Mackie, the last blacksmith to occupy Geo. Cull's blacksmith shop, is about to engage in other business.

Mrs. H. D. Casy has as a guest her father, Dr. L. J. Barrett of Jackson college, Jackson, Miss. He is accompanied by his wife, a stepmother, we hear, of Mrs. Casy.

A few years ago, some of our calendar had a very pretty picture, the copy of a painting, "First Steps." It was a picture of a little child taking its first steps in walking, as it was surrounded by loving friends, interested in its first efforts in this line. "First steps" are always interesting—if they are in the right direction. We have an interesting little boy friend of six or eight years, who has been taking his first steps in composition. Of course, his first subject would pertain to the hen. We reproduce his first work, verbatim at literature. "A hen. Ten hen has a short stubby back, right for eating hard bread crusts. Just after it has laid an egg it cackles. Its legs are all scaly and hard. After I kill a hen mother cuts off her legs and I play with them there is a cord I pull a cord and it makes her toes wiggle. The heneggs come from her breast. I chased a hen one day and she got tired then she squatted down in the grass so she thought I could not see her. If she was in the hen she would run until she was tired then she would run to a place where she could hide her head." Who dare predict where the wee lad's "last steps" may be found?

We have just received a very interesting letter from our former young townsman, Guy M. Badger, who has lately gone to the town of Fingert, Barnes county, North Dakota, to work on a farm. The place is some 45 to 50 miles westward from Fargo, and he is getting $40 a month. He finds it a most interesting section. His employer has 800 acres of land, and he has already this season put in over 500 acres of small grain and is still seeding. He also makes dairying a part of his work. Nearly all the farmers thereabouts are well-to-do and lead easy lives, with fine farm buildings and, many of them, with automobiles. Good, up-to-date schools and general intelligence are the order of the day there. On his employer's large farm, there is not a hill, nor a tree that has grown naturally. When one would look off any distance, he climbs the tower of a windmill, from which can be seen thousands of acres sown to wheat. But, with all this, he writes, he should like to see old Vermont, with its steep hillsides, stony fields, and woods, again. He recently rode ten miles one day, just to see running water, the nearest point at which it could be found. He expects to see California before he sees Vermont again.

The funeral of Edw. Perrin was held at his late home on Quarry street on Wednesday at 1 o'clock. It was largely attended, which attested to his many friends. The council is very sorry to lose her, as she has always worked with the right spirit toward the council.
